

Qualitative social science methodologies

Marco Picone, University of Palermo

This workshop focuses on the difference between quantitative and qualitative methods, offering suggestions on when and how to use them and focusing in particular on qualitative techniques. The growing field of mixed methods will be discussed as well. Several examples of qualitative techniques will provide guidelines aimed at simplifying the choices for scholars-in-training. Additionally, references to participatory techniques will help the participants in assessing the potential use of participation in their research.

Keywords: Qualitative methods, Mixed methods, Participation

Marco Picone is full professor of urban geography and geopolitics at the University of Palermo, where he teaches Urban Geography, Social Geography, Participatory Practices and Geopolitics of Migrations. His research focuses mainly on urban neighbourhoods, participation for the involvement of young adults and popular geopolitics.

Languages: Italian and English (along with some French)

Keywords: neighbourhoods, participation, inequalities, images of the city, popular geopolitics, migrations.

Link to CV and Publications:

<https://www.unipa.it/persona/docenti/p/marco.picone/?pagina=curriculum>